Exploring The Truth Project

A Biblical Worldview Journey

The Truth Project, developed by Focus on the Family and taught by Dr. Del Tackett, is a transformative DVD-based small group study designed to equip Christians with a biblical worldview. Comprising 12 lessons (plus an introductory session), this curriculum takes participants on a "worldview tour," examining life, culture, and faith through the lens of Scripture. Its core question—"Do you really believe that what you believe is really real?"—challenges believers to align their lives with God's truth in a world often swayed by cultural deceptions.

The course begins with Veritology: What is Truth?, defining truth as conformity to God's reality and contrasting it with the relativism pervasive in modern culture. Subsequent lessons build on this foundation, exploring philosophy, ethics, anthropology, and theology to reveal how a biblical worldview contrasts with secular ideologies. For instance, Philosophy & Ethics critiques materialistic views that exclude God, while Anthropology affirms humanity's creation in God's image against evolutionary claims. Theology emphasizes knowing God through His Word, and Science defends creation's revelation of divine design against godless philosophies like Darwinism.

The curriculum then shifts to social spheres—family, state, labor, and community—showing how God's triune nature imprints relational structures. Lessons like Sociology and Unio Mystica highlight the divine design in family and the intimate union with Christ, while The State warns against tyranny when governments reject God's authority. The American Experiment reflects on America's biblical roots, urging repentance to reclaim them, and Labor celebrates work as a creative act reflecting God's nature. The course concludes with Community & Involvement, calling believers to love their neighbors actively, mirroring Christ's compassion.

The Truth Project is more than a study; it's a call to action. By addressing the cosmic battle between truth and lies, it equips Christians to live boldly for God in every sphere of life. Whether you're a seasoned believer or seeking clarity in a chaotic culture, this curriculum offers a compelling framework to ground your faith in God's unchanging reality. Dive in, and discover how to live out what you believe is really real.

A Comprehensive Guide to a Biblical Worldview

In a world increasingly shaped by relativism, secularism, and competing ideologies, The Truth Project, a DVD-based small group curriculum developed by Focus on the Family and led by Dr. Del Tackett, offers Christians a robust framework to understand and live out a biblical worldview. This 12-lesson study guides participants through a “worldview tour,” examining foundational aspects of life, culture, and faith through the lens of Scripture. By addressing the cosmic battle between God’s truth and Satan’s lies, The Truth Project challenges believers with a provocative question: “Do you really believe that what you believe is really real?” This question anchors the curriculum, urging participants to align their lives with God’s reality in a culture often swayed by deception.

The Structure and Purpose of The Truth Project

The Truth Project is designed for small group study, with each of its 12 lessons (plus an optional introductory session) building on the previous to create a cohesive exploration of a biblical worldview. The curriculum covers foundational topics like truth, philosophy, and theology before delving into social spheres such as family, state, labor, and community. Dr. Del Tackett, a former Air Force officer and worldview expert, presents each session with clarity, weaving biblical teaching, historical examples, and cultural analysis to equip Christians to live transformed lives. The goal is not just intellectual understanding but practical application—empowering believers to engage their world with confidence in God’s truth.

The course’s structure is deliberate, moving from core concepts to their application in everyday life. Each lesson addresses a specific aspect of a biblical worldview, revealing how God’s truth contrasts with cultural lies in the ongoing cosmic battle. By asking, “Do you really believe that what you believe is really real?” The Truth Project challenges participants to examine their beliefs and live them out consistently. The lessons collectively aim to equip Christians to navigate a world shaped by competing ideologies, fostering a faith that impacts personal decisions and societal engagement. Below, we explore each lesson’s key themes and how they contribute to the overarching mission of aligning believers with God’s reality.

Lesson 1: Veritology: What is Truth?

The journey begins with defining truth as “conformity to fact or reality” (per the 1828 Webster’s Dictionary). This lesson contrasts biblical truth—rooted in God’s unchanging reality—with cultural relativism, which leads to social chaos. Tackett introduces the “worldview compass” (God, man, social order) and emphasizes the cosmic battle between truth and lies, urging participants to examine their beliefs’ alignment with reality.

Lesson 2: Philosophy & Ethics: Says Who?

This lesson explores philosophy as the quest for ultimate reality and ethics as moral standards. It critiques modern materialistic philosophies that confine reality to a “cosmic cube” excluding God, resulting in subjective ethics. Christians are called to renew their minds biblically, resisting worldly assumptions that lack a universal moral foundation.

Lesson 3: Anthropology: Who is Man?

Contrasting the biblical view of humanity—created in God’s image as body and spirit—with materialistic views of humans as random products of evolution, this lesson addresses the origin of evil. It explains evil as a result of the Fall, not inherent goodness as culture claims, and challenges secular views of self-fulfillment against biblical purpose and accountability.

Lesson 4: Theology: Who is God?

Knowing God is central to human identity, this lesson argues. It defends the Bible’s reliability against historical critics like Voltaire, emphasizing that true knowledge of God comes through His Word and personal relationship. Encountering God reveals sin and offers redemptive transformation, shaping believers’ identities.

Lesson 5: Science: What is True?

This lesson examines science as a tool to discover truth in creation, critiquing its distortion into godless philosophies like Darwinian evolution. Such ideologies, lacking empirical support, promote human autonomy and have led to historical atrocities like the Holocaust. The lesson underscores that creation reveals God’s attributes through general and special revelation.

Lesson 6: History: Whose Story?

History is presented as God’s sovereign narrative, with all events under His control (Isaiah 46:9-11). The lesson warns against revisionism and postmodernism, which deny metanarratives to promote human autonomy. Forgetting God’s role in history fuels cultural resistance to divine authority, urging believers to remember His acts.

Lesson 7: Sociology: The Divine Imprint

This lesson reveals God’s triune nature reflected in social systems like family, church, and state, which embody unity in diversity. It discusses cultural attacks on these spheres, particularly family structures, and highlights how dysfunction arises from rejecting God’s design or blurring boundaries.

Lesson 8: Unio Mystica: Am I Alone?

Exploring the mystical union between God and believers, this lesson emphasizes the intimate relationship offered through Christ, illustrated by biblical metaphors like the vine and branches. Idolatry disrupts this bond, akin to marital unfaithfulness, and believers are called to seek fulfillment in God alone.

Lesson 9: The State: Whose Law?

The state, as God’s delegate for justice, must operate under divine authority. This lesson critiques its overreach into tyranny when detached from God’s law, citing examples like Stalin and Hitler. Christians are urged to resist state idolatry and uphold biblical principles of justice.

Lesson 10: The American Experiment: Stepping Stones

This lesson views America's founding as rooted in biblical principles, influenced by Christian virtues for self-governance. It notes the nation's drift due to secularism and evolutionary thought, urging prayer and repentance to reclaim these roots without idolizing the nation.

Lesson 11: Labor: Created to Create

Labor is celebrated as a joyful reflection of God's creativity, not a curse. Structured in triune relationships, work builds culture, creates wealth, and fosters compassion. The lesson emphasizes aligning arts and media with God's truth and beauty, highlighting Christian influence in these areas.

Lesson 12: Community & Involvement: God Cares; Do I?

The final lesson stresses God's heart for the needy, calling believers to active, humble community involvement. Using their gifts to love neighbors, Christians counter neglect and survival-of-the-fittest mentalities, following Christ's example of identifying with the weak.

The Impact and Relevance of The Truth Project

The Truth Project is a call to action, equipping Christians to navigate a world filled with competing worldviews. Its comprehensive approach—covering theology, science, history, and social structures—provides a holistic framework for understanding God's truth. The curriculum's emphasis on the cosmic battle between truth and lies resonates today, as relativism and secularism continue to challenge biblical values. By grounding believers in Scripture, it fosters confidence to engage culture without conforming to it.

The small group format encourages discussion and accountability, making the lessons practical and personal. Whether addressing the family's divine design, the state's role, or the purpose of work, The Truth Project connects faith to everyday life. Its historical examples, like the consequences of godless ideologies, underscore the stakes of worldview choices.

For those seeking to deepen their faith or counter cultural deceptions, The Truth Project offers a compelling, accessible resource. Available through Focus on the Family, it remains a timeless tool for churches, small groups, and individuals. By answering the question, "Do you really believe that what you believe is really real?" with biblical conviction, participants are empowered to live transformed lives that reflect God's truth in every sphere.
